Pacquiao fights Cotto on Nov. 14

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA—FILIPINO SUPERstar Manny Pacquiao and three-time world champion Miguel Cotto of Puerto Rico will meet in Las Vegas on Nov. 14, promoter Bob Arum announced on Monday. (See related story in Sports, A17)

Pacquiao, considered the pound-for-pound world champion after flattening England's Ricky Hatton in the second round in May, will meet Cotto after failed overtures from US veterans Shane Mosley and Floyd Mayweather Jr.

THE DANGER warning has been raised by the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology, but this biker in Camalig, Albay, appears to be racing in the direction of the rumbling Mayon Volcano. But bikes will be put to good use by barangay police and disaster officials. They will bike around the 54 villages on the slopes of Mayon Volcano to warn and evacuate residents once the Alert Level 3 is up. They are equipped with emergency gadgets such as megaphones, transistor radios, flashlights, batons and whistles. According to Phivolcs, eight more episodes of volcanic quakes have been recorded the past few days and they are getting stronger.

Gov. Panlilio: It is God calling I run for president

By Dona Pazzibugan

PRIEST-TURNED-GOVERNOR Eddie Panlilio of Pampanga yesterday announced that he had decided to run for president in 2010.

"I have every intention to file my candidacy on or before [the deadline of] Nov. 30. I'm ready for all the consequences, including dispensation from priesthood," Panlilio declared at the weekly forum arranged by the Catholic Media Network in Intramuros, Manila.

"Until today many people were not sure [whether] I will run. They only learned today; we are only announcing our decision today," he said.

In Pampanga, reactions to Panlilio's announcement ranged from approval to disdain. Fr. Raul de los Santos described the governor's planned run as "quixotic," while businessman Panaro Romero, a former supporter, said he was "drunk with power."

Panlilio said he believed running for president was God's calling. "When I decided to offer myself [as presidential candidate], I felt at peace. I'm doing this not for me, not for myself. I felt

Palace backtracks on rape of narc's daughter

By Christian V. Esguerra and Leila B. Salaverria

MALACAÑANG YESTERDAY MADE A surprise turnaround and claimed the reported rape of the daughter of an antinarcotics agent by a drugs gang was "unverified"—a day after the Palace denounced the incident as "a vile crime of rape" and declared war on drug traffickers.

The Inquirer reported the incident on Monday based on an on-the-record phone interview with Director General Dionisio Santiago of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA).

Santiago later asked the Inquirer not to publish the story, saying he was trying to convince the girl's father to go to the media. Understandably, the father has refused to talk publicly about the matter.

But concerned with the public's right to know about a story imbued with public interest, Inquirer editors published it but withheld the names of the girl and her father to protect their privacy in accordance with the law involving violence against women and minors and owing to the sensitivity of the matter.

The reported attack on the girl took

SC sees no need for immediate TRO on poll deal

By Norman Bordadora and Kristine L. Alave

IT'S STILL ALL SYSTEMS GO.

In an en banc session, the Supreme Court yesterday saw no need to issue an order requested in an urgent petition to stop payments on the P7.2-billion project to automate next year's elections.

Instead, the high tribunal directed the Commission on Elections (Comelec) and Smartmatic and Total Information Management (TIM) to respond within 10 days to the petition of the Concerned Citizen's Movement (CCM).

Court spokesperson Jose Midas Marquez said the issue would likely be taken up during the July 29 hearing the tribunal had scheduled on the original petition filed earlier this month by CCM questioning the legality of the project.

In a "very urgent motion" on Monday, the CCM sought to stop the Comelec from releasing funds after finding out that the government was bound to pay almost P3 billion even before the delivery of the 80,000 counting machines, scheduled to begin in November.

This was how former Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr. described the merger between Lakas-CMD, the political party he used to lead, and President Macapagal-Arroyo's Kabalikat ng Malayang Pilipino (Kampi) when he asked the Commission on Elections (Comelec) to nullify the new party that arose from the partnership.

In a petition he filed yesterday, De Venecia, representative of Pangasinan's fourth district, asked the poll body to deny Lakas-

HIP COUPLE Mai and David Kaufman, owners of Kanna

Unique shop sells authentic mid-century stuff

Just as distinct is its owners' passion—'Dress your home the way you would yourself'

By Anna A. Jaeldora

YOU KNOW A PERSONAL collection gets too big if you need a bodega to store it in, especially if you're into mid-century furniture. If you're business-minded, you sell the furniture. But if you have a personal connection with your collection the way businessman David Kaufman has one with his, it's hard to let go.

"When I finally decided to let go of the pieces, it was like jumping into the water when it's really cold. But you need to be business and not be willing to sell your products," Kaufman said.

So, three years ago, the Kaufman family's Modern Antiques (Kanna) was born, showcasing nothing less than Kaufman's collection. Located at Cubao Expo (formerly Marikina Shoe Expo), Araneta Center, Cubao, Kanna has found its home in the bohemian art scene in this part of town.

In this charming, quaint little shop, you're transported to the hippie, offbeat culture of the '70s Haight St. in Haight-Ashbury, San Francisco, California. The vintage furniture, with unique fashion accessories and decor, is the perfect backdrop to have drinks and a good chat.

"If I were a bohemian artist, I'd like to live here," he said. "This is the place where people are driven by art. We're all artists first; the capitalism will come in a very distant second."

Students at Oxford

It was 15 years ago when Kaufman began collecting mid-century modern pieces. While pursuing his master's degree in development economics at Oxford University, he shared an apartment with a few students. Each had to pick a room in the apartment; he chose the living room.

With a fireplace of his own, he defined

12 simple rules for visiting your children

By [illegible]
Contributor

SO, OKAY, YOU'VE raised your children to have roots so they can grow, and to have wings so they can fly. In fact, they've already flown the coop, and are living on their own in some other country where you're not. Inevitably, you'll have to go and visit them. That should be a lot of fun, especially if you have a good relationship with them to begin with.

Still, there are some do's and don'ts that you must observe if your stay with them is to be pleasant and harmonious. Visiting our children, who now live in Australia and the US, my husband and I have made it a point to observe these self-imposed rules that have made our holidays with them sweet and memorable.

1. Realize that your child is already an adult and therefore should not be treated as [illegible]

Piolo on KC: Not a good time to admit anything

By Marinel R. Cruz

ACTOR PIOLO PASCUAL said he refuses to talk about his rumored romantic relationship with fellow ABS-CBN artist KC Concepcion—for fear it would be interpreted as a mere publicity stunt for their new project together.

"KC and I have decided it would be better if we answer questions about our relationship when our show is over. Now is really not a good time to say 'Yes, we're dating' or 'We're just friends' simply because we're doing something together," Piolo told Inquirer Entertainment at a media gathering for "Manila," the indie film he acted in and coproduced.

Lovers—but only in 'Paris'

Piolo and KC will soon be seen in the local adaptation of the Korean hit series "Lovers in Paris" on the Kapamilya network.

"We're actually getting to know each other. I just want to let the audience join us in the ride and see what happens later," Piolo explained. "Let's just say that KC is somebody special to me. It's also nice that her parents, especially her mom, and I, are OK."

Piolo, in his previous interviews, revealed his intentions of courting the eldest daughter of actress Sharon Cuneta. According to tabloid reports, he even gifted KC with several bottles of the actress' favorite perfume, Frederick Malle. Piolo reportedly handed them to KC shortly after he arrived from a trip to Paris where

Bessie meets 'Bakal Boys'

By Bayani San Diego Jr.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCER ALBERT Almendralejo called it divine intervention.

"It was heaven-sent," he said, of his chance encounter with US-based international model Bessie Badilla.

After a proposed funding from a corporate foundation didn't materialize, his movie "Bakal Boys" found an unexpected investor in Badilla.

In an e-mail interview, Badilla recalled how she got involved in the indie production as a "funny" coincidence.

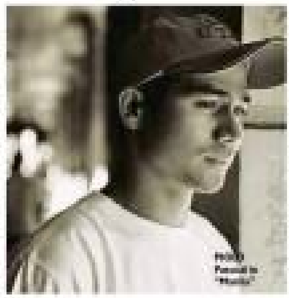

"I was having my teeth whitened at a clinic in Makati," she recalled. "In spite of the many contraptions in my mouth, the dentist and I were able to chat about life. You see, I have this God-given talent to talk—comprehensively but—even while my teeth are being bleached."

Badilla opened up to the dentist about her life as a widow, her birthplace Tondo and her love for Pinoy
